What this country needs is a good $12,000 college education.

We've got it, but we're only charging $4,000.

$4,000 is an average 4-year college tuition bill, exclusive of living and other expenses. A bargain for the student.

$12,000 is the average of what it actually costs the college to educate him—and to build the new facilities and the faculty needed to educate millions more like him in the years ahead. A burden for the college. And it might become a crisis.

Because the $8,000 deficit must be made up by gifts and grants. More help is needed from more businesses, and from individuals like you, people who believe that the future of this country lies in the potential of its young.

What this country needs are fewer bargains like this.

Give to the college of your choice.

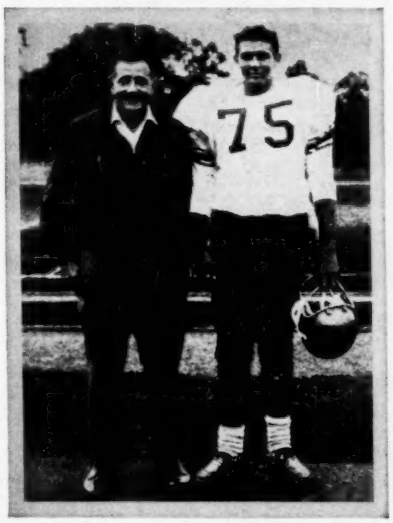
The generation gap: it may be America's best hope.



Millions of young Americans not only stand taller than their fathers—they're aiming higher. Sometimes, in a different direction.

They have a vision of a more equal economy and society, and the will to take part in shaping them.

Over 7,000,000 young men and women are now in our colleges and universities. Keeping up with their numbers, and the challenge of filling their knowledge needs, has brought about a financial crisis in higher education.

Tuitions, on the average, pay only ⅓ the cost of educating a student. The other ⅔ must come from other sources. And the difference in dollars amounts to billions.

Our higher education must keep moving ahead—with more facilities, larger faculties—and academic advances that will help this generation move ahead.

It can't be done without more help from more individuals, more businesses—with gifts and grants that encourage progress and innovation.

To better understand the need, ask a college.

Give to the college of your choice.
